

I actually believed in the system before becoming what I believe is awake and aware. I actually believed Obama and all of his lies he spewed in 2008. I was sucked into the lies and promises, which is what they counted on.

I immediately knew they were all lies somehow on the day of his inauguration. I don't know how, but as I watched him take the Oath of office, I knew the man would not be what he claimed to be and he would not follow through on any of his promises.

I did not expect him to do the opposite of every promise though. To me the man is as evil as you can get. Due to lying and then doing the absolute opposite of what he sucked people into thinking. That man has given away the country in full to special interest and the banks. He has chained people down, taken away their wealth and taken away every freedom we had. The only freedom left is the right to bear arms and they were doing the "Fast and Furious" to try and take that one away until they were caught.

The amount of fraud that all banks and corporations are getting away with, sanctified by all in the Federal Government at every level and sanctified by all at every level in the state governments, shows they have all sold their souls.

I could never morally vote for anyone who has sold their soul to be elected by lying to the people.

Understand there is not one difference between any person in government at any level, they are all game playing. There is no democracy left in the United States and don't believe a single word any of the puppets are promising that are running for president.

This is my promise, I shall never step foot into a voting booth again. The voting is fraud here in the U.S. just like it is fraud elsewhere in the world. All votes are turned to be what those who control the machines want them to be.

More...

I actually believed in the system before becoming what I believe is awake and aware. I actually believed Obama and all of his lies he spewed in 2008. I was sucked into the lies and promises, which is what they counted on. I immediately knew they were all lies somehow on the day of his inauguration. I don't know how, but as I watched him take the Oath of office, I knew the man would not be what he claimed to be and he would not follow through on any of his promises. I did not expect him to do the opposite of every promise though. To me the man is as evil as you can get. Due to lying and then doing the absolute opposite of what he sucked people into thinking. That man has given away the country in full to special interest and the banks. He has chained people down, taken away their wealth and taken away every freedom we had. The only freedom left is the right to bear arms and they were doing the "Fast and Furious" to try and take that one away until they were caught. The amount of fraud that all banks and corporations are getting away with, sanctified by all in the Federal Government at every level and sanctified by all at every level in the state governments, shows they have all sold their souls. I could never morally vote for anyone who has sold their soul to be elected by lying to the people. Understand there is not one difference between any person in government at any level, they are all game playing. There is no democracy left in the United States and don't believe a single word any of the puppets are promising that are running for president. This is my promise, I shall never step foot into a voting booth again. The voting is fraud here in the U.S. just like it is fraud elsewhere in the world. All votes are turned to be what those who control the machines want them to be.