

Women who suffer from migraines also seem to gain a much lower risk of breast cancer, according to a study released Thursday.

The study is the first of its kind to look at the hormonal relationship between breast cancer and the severe throbbing headaches that can cause vomiting, nausea and sensitivity to light, sound and smells.

More...