A former competitor, Election Systems & Software, a leading company in the election systems industry, will pay only $5 million for the business developed from Diebold's $31 million purchase in January 2002.

More...

Related: Two voting companies & two brothers will count 80 percent of U.S. election using both scanners & touchscreens

Voters can run, but they can't hide from these guys. Meet the Urosevich brothers, Bob and Todd.   Their respective companies, Diebold and ES&S
, will count (using both computerized ballot scanners and touchscreen machines) about 80 percent of all votes cast in the upcoming U.S. presidential election.

Both ES&S and Diebold have been caught installing uncertified software in their machines. Although there is no known certification process that will protect against vote rigging or technical failure, it is a requirement of most, if not all, states.

More...