

Donald Trump's legal team for the Russia investigation has had its share of setbacks. Most recently, lead attorney John Dowd resigned from his post, reportedly because Trump stopped listening to him. Losing Dowd didn't just mean losing a "fierce legal mind," it also meant losing the only lawyer on Trump's team with security clearance.

Now, Bloomberg reports, none of Trump's lawyers working on issues related to the Russia probe have clearance. Jay Sekulow, Trump's personal attorney and the host of Jay Sekulow Live!, replaced Dowd, but he's still waiting to be cleared. The newest members of the team — Rudy Giuliani, Marty Raskin and Jane Raskin — haven't been on the job long enough to get cleared themselves and none of them told Bloomberg whether they'd even sought such clearance.

More...